MA to MA-9 Managing and Understanding Behavior Problems in Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders

This is a training program for caregivers responsible for day-to-day care or supervision of dementia patients. The program, a series of ten modules, offers video and written materials designed to:

- 1) Provide background information about Alzheimer Disease and related disorders, including the current state of research, clinical evaluation and treatment.*
- 2) Teach caregivers skills to assess and modify behavior problems which interfere with proper care.*
- 3) Identify and address the special needs of caregivers.*

Case vignettes, accompanied by instructions and explanations, teach viewers to think about behavior using the systematic A-B-C approach. This allows the caregiver to design an individual plan to solve a patient's particular problem. This video tape training program is geared toward institutional staff, such as nurses and aides, to families, and to in-home, paid and non-paid caregivers responsible for day-to-day care or supervisions of patients.

Length: 31:21
Year: 1995
Subject: Intimacy, Sexuality and Alzheimer Disease
Producer: Terra Nova Films, Inc.
Audience: Caregivers, Health Care / Service Providers, Individuals in the early stages of Alzheimer Disease.
Copies: 1

When one partner in a marriage develops Alzheimer’s or a related form of dementia, the couple’s roles undergo a drastic change. Often the well spouse becomes a nurse/guardian, as the demented spouse becomes increasingly dependent. Both partners continue to need an intimate relationship in the broad definition of affection, respect and friendship, but filling those needs requires adjustments. The partners’ sexual needs may or may not change, depending upon their sexual history, but when they do, those changes can be a source of enormous frustration for both of them. Video features candid interviews with four couples affected by Alzheimer Disease. Note: comes with a study guide.

TH-3 There Is a Bridge
